MAATLA CENTRE

INTRODUCTION

Namibia's healthcare system, though well-disseminated, faces challenges in integration and coordination across its various tiers. Issues such as overcrowding, long waiting times, and poor quality of care impede effective healthcare delivery. Additionally, a significant portion of the population, particularly children, remains vulnerable due to inadequate access to healthcare services. The growing healthcare demands are further complicated by a shortage of employment opportunities and fragmented public health systems.

TARGET IMPACTS

The Maatla Centre aims to service 1600 patients per month, totaling 19,200 patients annually in the Khomas region, including areas like Kilomanjaro informal settlement, Okahandja Park, and Goreangab. Our primary target population comprises those lacking access to affordable healthcare. The business model anticipates reaching sustainability after 12 months of operation.
